

- A Seminar on Network Security by Cyber Blog, India

Cyber world is a cobweb which has surmounted us and made us so dependent that to free oneself from this mesh is next to impossible. With each passing day everything is becoming digital and going online. It is quite possible to make a living by spending a day in a closed room with an idiot box cuddled up in your lap. From official work to shopping household vegetables everything is at your service with a click of button. On one hand that is the level of comfort it has provided us while on the other it has made us prone to another dangerous world.

With such an ongoing revolution, criminals are making full use of this opportunity to exploit the insufficient knowledge of users who are so riveted by this virtual world that they fail to realize the threats it pose until they fall prey to it. India unlike the developed nations has only 243 million net users, which if the entire population is a cake is just a slice. With a vast economic capacity and low literacy rate, it is the major target. But this does not mean we should curb our internet activities. A little precaution and awareness has never done any harm. The same can ensure a better and safer experience in your virtual world.
